Relative merits of samples collected differed greatly. Some strains were found to be so poor in quality, yield, or general adaptation that they are of little value in their present form and do not appear to be promising sources of plant breeding material. Other strains were found to be valuable in their present form because of quality, yield and general adap-

Vegetables

MOST varieties of vegetables have been developed for sections other than the South. Such varieties are generally not capable of producing good yields of vegetables of high quality under weather conditions which occur in the South. Furthermore, they do not possess enough immunity, resistance or tolerance to important insects, diseases, and other pests so common in the section. Therefore, necessity has encouraged a few farmers to save vegetable seed from varieties that have done best and gradually over the year certain strains have veloping varieties.

Farmers Have Big Job To Meet PEANUT Goals This Year

Alabama farmers have been asked to grow 850,000 acres of peanuts in 1943. This is 200,000 acres more than the 1942 production and two and one-half times the acreage that was planted in 1941.

But there's a good reason for this increase imports of vegetable oils from foreign countries, therefore America's farmers are asked

More peanut oil is needed, not only for food out for military uses. Defeat and death of result from a lack of peanut oil. No one but our farmers can produce the peanuts which are needed. Every farmer who raises more peanuts is helping to win the war, for peanuts are powerful fighters in this war.

PEANUTS ESSENTIAL TO WAR EFFORT

Here's proof of the importance of maximum peanut production in our war effort: Peanuts produce nutritious food for our shortening, salad oil and oleomargarine are just a few of the nutritious food products

Peanut oil is used to make explosives for fluids for fighting planes, special lubricants for high speed motors and metal turning Peanut meal is fed to poultry and livestock. More peanuts mean more peanut meal will and eggs-all high rating fighting foods. Indeed "Fighting Peanuts" growing on and harvested from your farm will help win this
